The Wildcat . . .
A Prologue
1978

A Prologue

All of us, as human beings belonging to an immense universe, have our own individual reasons for living and being a part of this world. We all imagine a dream that we envision as happening someday. Usually, we possess a goal or ambition we are looking forward to achieving. In order to master that ambition, we take time to go to college to prepare ourselves by increasing our knowledge, expanding our experiences, and developing our talents. To perform these functions, all of us here have chosen Pearl River Junior College as the medium of our education.

Consider these years at Pearl River a prologue . . . an introduction or beginning to a play . . . the staging of the life we plan to lead in the future. As we prepare for the future, making the grade and competing in sports, it is our beginning to finding out our full potential and obtaining as much as we can out of life. This could be more schooling, a new job or a marriage or a fusion of all three.

To be fully enjoyed, this prologue must be valued for its total worth as the commencement to the stage of your tomorrows.

Your prologue . . . how did you participate in it?

The Tryouts

An Endeavor . . .

This is our effort to test our skills for the prologue of our play of life. We put our abilities to work and participate in many segments of the prologue.

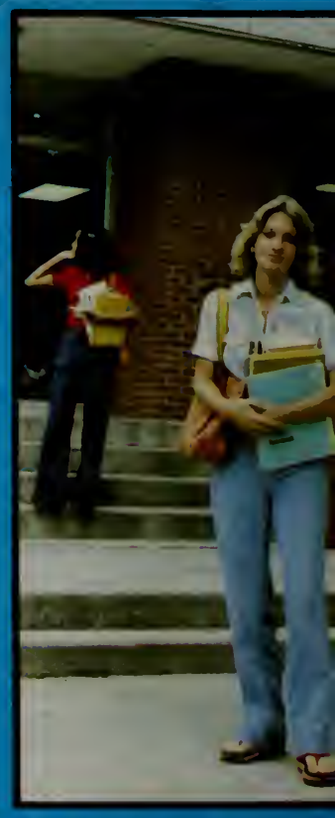
Getting Settled in the Dorms

To Prepare For Try–Outs . . .

Making an Effort

Registration represents a significant part of the trying-out experience. All students interested in furthering their education at PRC begin by preparing for classes. In thinking ahead for the future plans, schedules are made out to fit a certain major, or for some beginning freshman, the major is undecided until a decision can be reached. There are lines to wait in for I. D.'s to be made, to receive computer cards, and to talk with advisors. However, the wait is worth it when it paves the way for a new future.

During registration students become re-acquainted with old friends, while new students make new friends. It is a time of reminiscing and yet, a time for becoming familiar with new surroundings.



to Learn Your Part

Becoming Familiar . . .

"Meet the Wildcats" night was an excellent time for students at PRC to get more acquainted and for the football team to display its efforts of practice before parents, friends, and faculty. The food served at the event was not the usual beef steak but rather, hamburgers. However, the barbeque was just as delicious for all involved. Crowds of people enjoyed their food in the stands awaiting a scrimmage from the Wildcat team.

New Horizons

Growing

Learning How to Act . . .

After a couple of weeks passed by, an assembly was held in PRC's gymnasium for the entire school. After Mr. Knippers opened the assembly with a prayer, Tracy Taylor, the Student Council President, introduced President White to speak. Dr. White then gave a rundown on the rules and regulations for PRC, general information about the school, and wished everyone luck and success.

To Support

The Characters . . .

"No man is an island, no man stands alone," . . . We all have a part to play in the world we live in, following a dream to be what we want and to create our own lifestyle. The characters we interact with each day are our friends, fellow classmates and advisors. Each person we come in contact with contributes to the development of our character.

Directors and Producers

The directors and producers of this play set the guidelines for acting and advise the actors of drama techniques. The administration and faculty of Pearl River perform this job well. With their leadership and instruction skills, they create a solid foundation of education for the Pearl River College student.

The Rehearsal . . .

This segment of getting prepared for the play of life is putting it all together. We learn our cues and exactly what our part involves. We recite our lines and dramatize them. We practice the movements on stage. This is a learning experience which takes place by our going to classes and participating in extracurricular activities.

Costumes, Make–Up, Design

The costume of the actor can be seen through his class picture, while his make-up and design may be captured in the club or organization he belongs to. Costume and make-up is what an individual uses in the play to further characterize himself more vividly to the audience. It shows more distinctly what kind of person he is.

The Dress Rehearsal

The dress rehearsal is our final chance to perfect our movements and expressions before the opening night of the play. We receive honor and recognition for the work we have done through the selection of Who's Who and the graduation of sophomores. Now, we have successfully prepared ourselves for the stage of life, and for whatever endeavor we plan to pursue.
